President's Address

Dear Colleagues,

The Organizing Committee welcomes you to the Panhellenic Congress on Thoracic and Occupational Diseases: Consensus and Controversies, which aims to continue a tradition established by our Society since 1984.

Over the years, the Congresses organized by the Hellenic Society of Respiratory and Occupational Chest Diseases have contributed in the formation of a unique scientific forum for the presentation of original research, diffusion of knowledge on the latest developments in respiratory medicine, and constructive networking between specialists from Greece and abroad.

The present congress incorporates two seminars under the auspices of the European Respiratory Society as well as a number of distinguished Greek and foreign speakers. It also includes State-of-the-Art lectures and educational workshops and seminars. Special mention must be made of the 3rd Greek-Serbian Workshop with extended participation of other countries, and of the 2nd Nursing Day which covers nursing topics on the management of respiratory diseases.

All the original papers presented in the Congress will be published in a special edition of an English language journal and will appear on PubMed.

The large number of distinguished Greek and invited foreign speakers and coordinators, and your active participation, in the traditionally warm, friendly and welcoming environment of our city, will be the decisive factors for the success of our Congress.

On behalf of the Organizing Committee

The President

K. Zarogoulidis MD, PhD, FCCP

Professor of Pulmonary Diseases and Tuberculosis

Head of Pulmonary Department,

Aristotle Univ. of Thessaloniki

The General Secretary

A. Papagiannis MD, PhD

Pulmonologist

Dear Colleagues,

Collaboration between Greek and Serbian experts in the field of pulmonology lasts for more than two decades. It is quite obvious that continuous development in pulmonology requires from us permanent education. Professional gathering and the constant stream of high quality basic science and knowledge as well as experience exchange is one of the major conditions for successful upgrading and education. The Panhellenic Congress on Chest and Environmental Diseases, Thessaloniki, 20-23 November 2014, will be the place where pulmonologists from Greece and Serbia will gather again, with the goal of further improvement of our mutual cooperation and joint projects. We are convinced that this cooperation will also be a major contribution to our understanding of today's "state of the art" evidences and for the future developing of pulmonology in this part of the world and wider.
